Global Mindset Skills to Manage Across Cultures

The world is transforming into a global village characterised by intensive interactions at multiple levels. Local companies are becoming international since they must deal with foreign business partners. At the same time, local executives must deal with global companies, colleagues, and stakeholders (business partners, clients, agents, employees, etc.).

Simultaneously, organisational structures are becoming less hierarchical, process-oriented, and diverse and are driven by collaborative cooperation and co-creation abilities.

Global Mindset Leaders have:

- Cosmopolitan outlook: an understanding of cultures, political and economic systems in other countries and how global systems work;
- Mindfulness skills: Passionate about diversity and ability to deal with multicultural people and be comfortable in building trusting relationships with people from different backgrounds;
- Knowledge about the application of protocol, handling and being aware of the sensitivities when seating corporate representatives and another guest, navigating a formal dinner or social networking events, taking writing communication, and managing different cultures.

Key Challenges:

- Build the right images and perceptions about your nations and its qualities;
- Facilitate the process for Twinned Cities with Dutch cities;
- Be instrumental in building business and cultural relations;
- Organize events that create impact and experience;
- Be the soft engine (first impressions) connecting your country's stakeholders from other countries.

The impact of this ongoing internationalisation requires entrepreneurs, consultants, businesses, government, and other professionals to have a global mindset, e.g. the skills to interact and navigate across cultures in a smooth the way for cooperative and productive performances.
